

James Blannon, M.Ed., MS, BS

The rehabilitation process is dynamic and covers the needs of individuals at each stage of development over the life span. For me, the challenges are more of moral value and compass than monetary value. I enjoy helping and inspiring others who may be deprived of assistance due to an emotional, cognitive, developmental learning, or physical disability. The primary focus is not on the disability but the ability to assist in helping individuals meet their full optimal level of functioning so they become productive members of today's society.