Executive Director
Florida Alliance for Assistive Services and Technology, Inc.

As a person who has a disability and a former Florida Vocational Rehabilitation client, I've worked with numerous counselors who helped me to achieve my employment goals. Through this experience, I understand the importance of certification for Rehabilitation Counselors. CRC's have a higher level of educational experience and are invested in staying inform on current research and practices through the certification's continuing education standards. This credential ensures that people who have disabilities are working with the highest quality of rehabilitation counselors available. CRC's should be the standard, so that every individual who has a disability has the opportunity to benefit from their service.
